

GDCSS Esoteric Journal Guidelines

Purpose
Your Esoteric Journal is the permanent record of your journey through the GDCSS. It is where you complete assignments, record your experiences, ask questions, and document your growth throughout your studies.

Journal Organization
Create one Esoteric Journal document for each phase of study.

Within each journal, use the following entry types as needed:

- Lesson assignments
- Reflections
- Personal observations
- Questions
- Insights

RJ – Ritual Journal Entries
- Meditations
- Rituals
- Pathworkings
- Contemplations
- Other assigned practices

DJ – Dream Journal Entries
- Dreams
- Recurring symbols in dreams
- Notable dream experiences

Every Entry Should Include
- Date
- Time Beginning and Time Ending (RJ)
- Entry type (PJ, RJ, or DJ)
- Your observations

Journal Guidelines
- Write honestly.
- Record what happened, not what you hoped would happen.
- Observe before interpreting.
- Do not rewrite previous entries.
- Date every entry.
- Write as soon as reasonably possible after completing an assignment or practice.
- Focus on consistency rather than perfection.

Good Questions to Ask Yourself

- What happened?
- What did I notice?
- How did I respond?
- What surprised me?
- What questions do I have?
- What, if anything, did I learn?

(PJ) Novitiate Phase 2 Lesson 2 – Reflection
Today's lesson reminded me that I often judge my progress too quickly. I realized I tend to look for dramatic experiences instead of appreciating gradual growth. I would like to become more patient and observant as I continue my studies.

(RJ) Candle Meditation
Today I practiced a five-minute candle meditation. I sat quietly and focused my attention on the flame, gently returning my focus whenever my mind wandered. During the exercise, I experienced moments of calm as well as periods of distraction. Although nothing unusual occurred, I found it became easier to maintain my attention as the meditation continued. I finished the practice feeling more relaxed and mentally settled than when I began.

(DJ) I dreamed that I was walking through an unfamiliar library filled with old books. Although I could not read the titles, I felt as though I was searching for something important. I eventually found a single book resting on a table, but I woke before opening it. The dream felt significant, though I am unsure what it might mean, so I have recorded it for future reference.

Remember
Your Esoteric Journal is not a test of your writing ability. It is a record of your experiences, observations, and personal development. Honest, consistent entries are far more valuable than perfect ones.
